GUNMAKER: LAWSUIT BY NEWTOWN MASSACRE FAMILIES IS OVERREACH

In the maker of the assault rifle used to kill 26 children and educators at a Connecticut school in 2012 argued that attempts to limit the sale of such weapons to civilians are best left to lawmakers and not families of the victims who sued the company. A lawyer for Bushmaster Firearms, which manufactures the AR-15 that Adam Lanza used in his attack on Sandy Hook Elementary School, told a Connecticut judge the 2005 federal Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act prohibited the suit. "It's not the role of this court or perhaps a jury to decide whether civilians as a broad class of people are not appropriate to own these kinds of firearms," James Vogts, an attorney for Bushmaster's parent company, Remington Arms, told a courtroom so packed that more than a dozen spectators were watching the hearing standing in a hallway outside the court. REUTERS

LAWYER: TEXAS 'AFFLUENZA' MOM HAS CURFEW EASED

2 The mother of the Texas "affluenza" teenager had her curfew eased, her attorney said on Monday, in her first court appearance since being charged by a grand jury last month with helping her son flee to Mexico. Tonya Couch, 49, was indicted by a Tarrant County grand jury on charges of hindering apprehension and money laundering for aiding her son Ethan Couch in violating a probation deal that kept him out for jail for killing four people while driving drunk in 2013. The curfew easing came at a hearing that lasted a few minutes before a district court judge. Her lawyer said after the session that the change will make it easier for her to find a job. He did not provide other details on the curfew. REUTERS

TRUMP'S CAMPAIGN MANAGER LEAVES STAFF

3 Donald Trump's presidential campaign manager has left, a Trump spokeswoman said on Monday, a further disruption to a campaign already at odds with senior Republican Party figures over his policies. The New York Times said Trump had fired Corey Lewandowski, citing two unnamed people. Lewandowski, who had managed Trump's campaign since it began last year, did not immediately respond to requests for comment. A person working for the campaign told Reuters that some staffers were only learning of the departure through media reports. "The Donald J. Trump Campaign for President, which has set a historic record in the Republican primary having received almost 14 million votes, has today announced that Corey Lewandowski will no longer be working with the campaign," Hope Hicks, the campaign spokeswoman, said in a statement. REUTERS

Feds: Corruption charges against cops 'dishonor' NYPD

Brooklyn businessman with ties to de Blasio allegedly bribed cops with trips, liquor, prostitute.

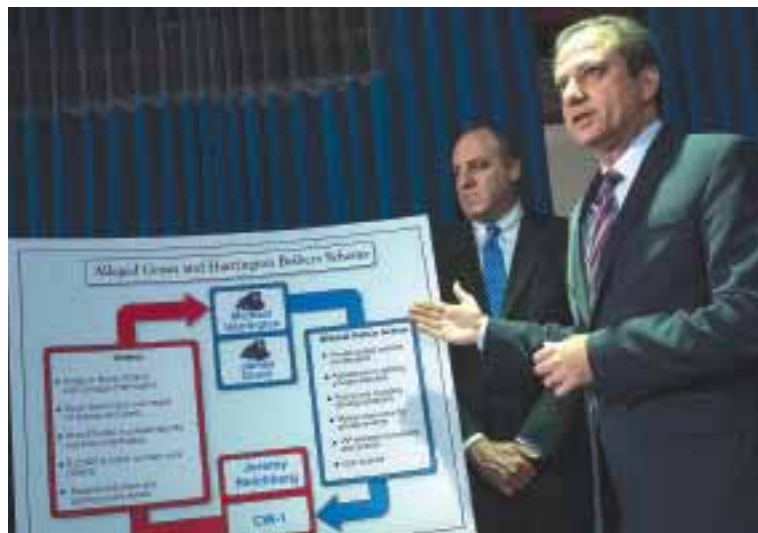

ANGY ALTAMIRANO
@aaltamirano28
angy.altamirano@metro.us

A trio of NYPD officers and a Brooklyn business consultant found themselves in handcuffs Monday morning after federal investigators accused them of a string of alleged public corruption offenses including accepting bribes in return for special police treatment.

U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara announced that NYPD Deputy Chief Michael Harrington, 50; Deputy Inspector James Grant, 43; Sgt. David Villanueva, 42; and businessman Jeremy Reichberg, 42 — who has connections to Mayor Bill de Blasio — had been arrested on bribery charges.

Harrington, Grant and Reichberg were charged in Manhattan federal court for exchanging tens of thousands of dollars worth of meals, trips, home renovations, prostitutes and other benefits for police favors such as police escorts, ticket fixing and help in settling private disputes.

Villanueva — who was a former supervisor in the NYPD's gun licensing division — was charged with bribery for allegedly receiving money to expedite and approve gun license applications for individuals, including some with questionable backgrounds.

"It is heartbreaking to see police officers, who have taken the oath to serve and protect, allegedly bring dishonor to an institution and profession deserving of the greatest honor," Bharara said.

According to the complaint, Reichberg and another individual — who has since pleaded guilty and is cooperating with investigators — came up with the plan to provide "lavish benefits" to high-ranking NYPD officials in return for police-related assistance.

From 2012-15, Grant was a commanding officer at a Brooklyn precinct and later became deputy inspector and commanding officer of the 19th Precinct on the Upper East Side. Harrington went from executive officer at Brooklyn North to executive officer at the NYPD chief of department's office.

According to prosecutors, some of the "benefits" accepted by Grant included a private jet trip to Las Vegas for the Super Bowl, a two-night stay at a Rome hotel which was worth more than $1,000, contracting work at his home worth about $12,000 and jewelry. Harrington allegedly accepted thousands of dollars in dinners, hotel rooms for a family trip to Chicago worth more than $6,000 and private security work worth tens of thousands of dollars for a company he "helped manage."

In return, both NYPD officials helped Reichberg and the second individual with police-related requests such as police escorts, resources to investigate private or civil matters, VIP access to parades and other city events, and Grant gave cards to the two men and their associates that would let them avoid traffic tickets.

Grant allegedly also helped Reichberg obtain an NYPD gun license and also tried to get the other man a license as well.

"The abuses of power alleged in this case are not victimless crimes," said

Diego Rodriguez, FBI assistant director-in-charge. "The victims are the citizens of New York, who rely on officers to fulfill their sworn duty."

Under the complaint against Villanueva, it is alleged that from at least 2012 through 2016, the Long Island resident was given cash bribes and other benefits such as limousine rides and bottles of liquor by Alex Lichtenstein, who ran a Brooklyn-based business charging clients thousands of dollars to expedite their gun license applications.

Licenses were allegedly secured within weeks, when normally it can take more than a year.

"These are never good days, these are never easy days, but what I see here is that the system works," Police Commissioner Bill Bratton said.

Reichberg, affiliated with JR Consultants, and a real estate investor, Jona Rechnitz, have been at the center of the corruption probe, Reuters reported. Both men were fundraisers for de Blasio and served on his 2013 inaugural committee.

Bharara said there are no allegations involving the mayor in the complaints and declined to comment further.

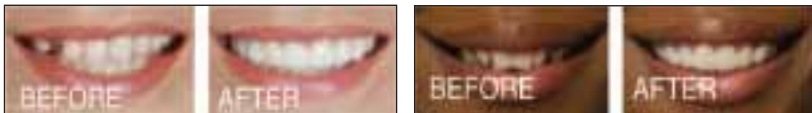

"It is heartbreaking to see police officers, who have taken the oath to serve and protect, allegedly bring dishonor to an institution and profession deserving of the greatest honor."

Teen arrested in hate crime attack on man leaving Queens mosque

The victim suffered multiple broken bones in his face, fractured ribs and a concussion.

A 14-year-old boy was in handcuffs Monday after authorities arrested him for the brutal attack of a Muslim man last month outside a Queens mosque.

According to the New York Daily News, the teen — who was not identified because of his age — was arrested for assaulting Mohamed Rasheed Khan on June 1 as the 59-year-old was leaving the Center for Islamic Studies on Jamaica Avenue.

The boy, who was joined by two friends during the attack, told authorities that the assault happened after one of his friends had suggested to play the “knockout game,” the Daily News reported.

The three boys then decided to attack Khan who was riding his bicycle, according to ABC7 New York.

The two other boys were still being sought as of Monday afternoon.

According to the New York chapter of the Council on American-Islamic Relations — which urged law enforcement to investigate the incident as a possible hate crime — Khan was wearing traditional Islamic garb at the time of the incident.

“Because of the location of the attack outside a mosque, the Islamic attire of the victim, and because nothing was stolen by the alleged attackers, we urge law enforcement authorities to investigate a possible bias motive for this troubling incident,” CAIR-NY Executive Director Afaf Nasher said in a statement.

“We urge the NYPD to step up patrols in the area of the mosque, particularly during activities associated with the upcoming fast of Ramadan,” he said.

Khan suffered multiple broken bones in his face, fractured ribs, a concussion and was not able to speak or open his eyes following the assault.

The organization also said that the boys, who did not steal anything from Khan, were allegedly seen laughing as they left the scene.

“My uncle is an American citizen, and did not deserve this, and he is very humble and he doesn’t bother anybody,” Khan’s niece told ABC following the attack.

“He believes in Islamic ways — he was coming to pray, and Islam is all about love and caring for others. The criminals that did this, they don’t identify with that.”

Cops: Man arrested for Monday Columbus Circle subway slashing

Police have made an arrest related to a Monday morning subway slashing that left one man hospitalized.

Just after 2 a.m., a dispute on a northbound A train spilled onto the platform at Columbus Circle, ABC7 reported. The reason for the dispute was not clear.

The suspect, 21, allegedly slashed the victim, also 21, in the neck on the A train platform, the New York Daily News reported. The victim, who is expected to recover, was taken to New York-Presbyterian University Hospital with his neck wrapped in bandages.

Two people were taken into custody by police after the incident, ABC7 added.

One man was arrested in connection to the incident, and a woman was taken by officials on suspicion of obstruction after the attack, police told the Daily News, adding that she was not involved with the slashing.

Detectives told ABC7 they will interview the victim to uncover a motive for the slashing.

Cops: Bronx woman kills boyfriend over cellphone password

A woman was arrested after a disagreement about a cellphone password resulted in a stabbing that left one man dead.

Police took Laura Montanez, 21, into custody around 6:30 p.m. on Sunday after authorities were called to 311 E. 188th St. in the Bronx after receiving reports of a stabbing, according to Pix11.

Investigators said that Montanez fatally stabbed Kedwin Valerio, 25, in her Fordham Heights apartment after the two began arguing over the password to her cellphone, the New York Daily News added. Violence began when she refused to give up the password, police said.

“The girlfriend and boyfriend were always fighting, every day,” neighbor Betty Perez was quoted by the Daily News in a separate report.

At the scene, police arrested Montanez, who has been charged with murder, manslaughter and weapon possession, the Daily News added.

Supreme Court rejects challenge to NY, Conn. assault weapon bans

The laws in New York and Connecticut were enacted after the Sandy Hook shootings.

The Supreme Court on Monday left in place gun control laws in New York and Connecticut that ban assault weapons like the one used in last week's massacre at an Orlando nightclub, rejecting a challenge brought by gun rights advocates.

The court's action underlined its reluctance to insert itself into the simmering national debate on gun control. The justices have not made a major gun rights ruling since 2010.

The justices declined to hear an appeal of an October ruling by the New York-based 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that upheld laws prohibiting semiautomatic weapons and large capacity magazines in the two northeastern states.

The laws in New York and Connecticut, among the strictest in the nation, were enacted after a gunman with a semiautomatic rifle killed 20 young children and six educators in 2012 at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Connecticut.

The challengers had asserted that the laws violated the Constitution's Second Amendment protection of the right to bear arms. The court denied the appeal with no comment or recorded vote.

The gunman in the June 12 attack at an Orlando gay night club that killed 49 people, the deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history, used a semiautomatic rifle that would have been banned in New York and Connecticut.

The Supreme Court issued important rulings in gun cases in 2008 and 2010 but has not taken up a major one since.

In December, the court declined to hear a challenge to a Illinois town's assault weapons ban. But the justices in March threw out a Massachusetts court ruling that stun guns are not covered by the Second Amendment and sent the case back to the state's top court for further proceedings.

In the 2008 District of Columbia v. Heller case, the court held for the first time that the Second Amendment guaranteed an individual's right to bear arms, but the ruling applied only to firearms kept in the home for self-defense. That ruling did not involve a state law and applied only to federal regulations. Two years later, in the case McDonald v. City of Chicago, the court held that the Heller ruling covered individual gun rights in states.

U.S. gun laws

In total, seven states and the District of Columbia ban semiautomatic rifles. A national law barring assault weapons expired in 2004, and congressional Republicans and some Democrats, backed by the influential National Rifle Association gun rights lobby, beat back efforts to restore it.

The United States has among the most permissive gun policies in the world. Because the Congress has been a graveyard for gun control legislation, some states and localities have enacted their own measures.

The court lost one of its strongest pro-gun rights members in February when conservative Justice Antonin Scalia died.

The expired federal assault gun ban had barred the manufacture and sale of semiautomatic guns with military-style features as well as magazines holding more than 10 rounds of ammunition.

Firefighters hold 'sleeping giant' wildfire in check

The more than 1,900 firefighters battling the Sherpa Fire were laboring under scorching heat that has led the National Weather Service to issue an excessive heat warning for California, Nevada and Arizona.

A stubborn wildfire stoked by triple-digit temperatures blazed for a sixth day outside Santa Barbara in coastal Southern California on Monday as crews worked to keep the blaze some have called a "sleeping giant" in check, officials said.

So far, the so-called Sherpa Fire burning in chaparral and tall grass about 20 miles northwest of Santa Barbara has led to the evacuation of hundreds of residents from ranches and campgrounds in the hilly area.

Authorities have considered allowing at least some of those people to return to their homes as they assess a blaze that overnight held at less than 8,000 acres, said Jim Schwarber, a spokesman for the multi-agency team combating the blaze.

The fire, which broke out last Wednesday in the Los Padres National Forest and is 54 percent contained, has been called a "sleeping giant" due to the triple-digit temperatures and bone-dry brush in the area, which has not burned in decades, he said.

"We're working hard to keep that giant contained so it doesn't wake up," Schwarber said.

So far, the blaze has destroyed only one building — a water-treatment center at a campground, he said.

But it has threatened more than 200 structures and forced officials to close the 101 Freeway near the coast of the Pacific Ocean periodically as it has advanced to within less than a mile of the shore.

"Red flag warnings"

for extreme fire conditions were in effect for mountains around Los Angeles on Monday, said National Weather Service meteorologist Matt Solum.

About 200 miles to the south of the Sherpa Fire, firefighters were battling a smaller blaze that started on Sunday in San Diego County near the border with Mexico.

The wildfire just north of Tecate, Mexico, had charred more than 1,900 acres (769 hectares) and was only 5 percent contained on Monday, according to the website of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection.

Two states away, the so-called Dog Head Fire in a largely unpopulated area of central New Mexico was at more than 17,000 acres with 9 percent containment on Monday, after the blaze destroyed 24 homes soon after breaking out last week, according to the tracking website InciWeb.gov.

Full Orlando 911 transcript released; gunman pledged allegiance to Islamic State

The U.S. Justice Department and the FBI on Monday released what they said was the complete transcript of the phone conversation between the Orlando, Florida, shooter and 911 police operators as he threatened to strap explosives to his hostages.

The release of the full transcript came a few hours after the FBI had issued an edited transcript of the calls.

In the full transcript, the gunman, Omar Mateen, is quoted pledging allegiance to Islamic State leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi.

Mateen, 29, killed 49 people at a gay nightclub in Florida on June 12, in the deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history. He threatened to detonate a car rigged with bombs and to strap hostages into explosive vests, according to transcripts of the 911 calls he made while police tried to rescue people trapped in the club.

The FBI and Justice Department said they had released a redacted transcript of the conversations because of sensitivity to the interests of survivors and victims' families, and the integrity of the investigation.

But the first transcript led U.S. House of Representative Speaker Paul Ryan and other politicians to call for the release of a full transcript after a political battle over gun violence brewed in the U.S. Congress.

Mateen's conversations with a dispatcher and crisis negotiators were made public as police sought to fend off criticism that they may have acted too slowly to end a three-hour standoff at the Pulse nightclub in Orlando.

"You people are gonna get it and I'm gonna ignite it if they try to do anything stupid," Mateen said during one of the calls, according to the FBI transcript. REUTERS

Facebook investors OK new share class to keep Zuckerberg at helm

Facebook shareholders approved a proposal to create a new class of non-voting shares, a move aimed at letting Chief Executive Officer Mark Zuckerberg give away his wealth without relinquishing control of the social media company he founded.

The company's plan to issue two "Class C" shares for each Class A and Class B share held by shareholders, in what is effectively a 3-for-1 stock split, was approved by Facebook shareholders at the company's annual general meeting on Monday.

Zuckerberg said in December that he intended to put 99 percent of his Facebook shares into a new philanthropy project focusing on human potential and equality.

The creation of the Class C shares would allow Zuckerberg to sell the non-voting stock, but keep the voting Class A and Class B shares that would let him retain control of Facebook.

Zuckerberg plans on running Facebook "for a very long time," the 32-year-old CEO told shareholders at a Q&A session at the AGM.

Shareholders also approved the continued tenure of all the eight board members, including billionaire investor Peter Thiel, who were up for re-election.

Facebook announced the plan to create the new class of non-voting shares on April 27. The approval of the plan was virtually certain since Zuckerberg controls the company.

Man arrested at Trump rally said he wanted to shoot candidate

A man arrested over the weekend trying to wrestle a gun from a police officer at a Las Vegas rally by presumptive Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump told an investigator that he wanted to kill the candidate, court papers showed on Monday.

Michael Steven Sandford, 19, was arrested on Saturday at the Treasure Island hotel in Las Vegas after trying to disarm the officer, according to Las Vegas police, who said he had been handed over to the U.S. Secret Service.

According to court papers filed on Monday in federal court in Nevada, Sandford told a Secret Service agent that he had driven to Las Vegas from California with the goal of shooting Trump.

He was charged with committing an act of violence on restricted ground and was due in federal court in Nevada on Monday afternoon, Natalie Collins, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's Office, said in an email.

It was not immediately clear if Sandford had an attorney.

Sandford had a British driver's license and claimed to have been in the United States for a year and a half, the documents showed. They did not specify his nationality but said he had lived in Hoboken, New Jersey, after coming to the United States.

"Sandford claimed he had been attempting to kill Trump for about a year but decided to act on this occasion because he finally felt confident about trying it," according to court papers. REUTERS

Is there a new Bling Ring?

Sometimes life imitates Sofia Coppola movies ... right? Recently there's been a spate of high-end Hollywood burglaries, which saw jewelry and large sums of cash swiped from the homes of the rich and famous, namely Kevin Hart, Chris Brown, Scott Disick and Blac Chyna. Now law enforcement officials are telling TMZ that the thefts might be connected — that it might be copycat burglars who themselves are stealing an idea from the original “Bling Ring,” the group of youths who nicked goods from Paris Hilton, Orlando Bloom, Lindsay Lohan and more back in 2008 and 2009. Their exploits were chronicled in Coppola's 2013 film, and maybe a new group of kids saw that and thought getting busted and milked for an art movie was a solid idea. Either way, you should watch Sofia Coppola's underrated motion picture “The Bling Ring.”

Maxim criticized for Photoshopping Priyanka Chopra's armpits

Actress Priyanka Chopra looks flawless on Maxim India's June/July cover, but it seems as though the editors beg to differ.

When the cover image was released, the focus wasn't on the actress, named “The Hottest Woman in the World” by the lad mag, but on her silky smooth armpit, which, truth be told, looks totally unrealistic and almost doll-like.

The Photoshop move has us wondering, what exactly was wrong with Chopra's armpit? Is this the expectation for the perfect armpit? How much Nair do we have to use for our armpits to look like that?

PRIYANKA CHOPRA/INSTAGRAM

While Twitter users agree Chopra is absolutely stunning, they were enraged with the magazine for “white-washing” the actress' pits.

Neither Chopra nor Maxim have addressed the allegations about the edited armpit.

Will Liam Payne be the next father in ID?

One Direction member Liam Payne is ready to start a family with girlfriend Cheryl Cole, according to reports.

The 22-year-old singer has been dating Cole for about eight months. And according to The Sun, he and the former “X Factor” judge are ready to take their relationship to the next level.

The U.K. tabloid has revealed that the two are reportedly trying for a baby, which would make Payne the second member of One Direction to become a parent — earlier this year, Louis Tomlinson's ex-girlfriend Briana Jungwirth gave birth to a baby boy named Freddie.

We know we're jumping the gun, but we're hoping that fellow boy band members Harry Styles and Niall Horan join in on the baby bonanza soon, because nothing would be cuter than a 1D group playdate.

Zoe Saldana fires back at ‘Nina’ critics

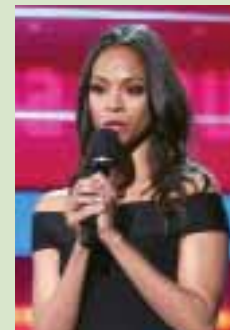

Zoe Saldana, who portrayed Nina Simone in the recent biopic “Nina,” has fired back over criticism about her casting as the late singer.

“There's no one way to be black,” she says in an interview in Allure. “I'm black the way I know how to be. ... I'm raising black men. Don't you ever think you can look at me and address me with such disdain.”

Controversy over her casting began after it was announced in 2012. In the film, the light-skinned Saldana wears dark makeup and face-altering prosthetics, which many fans see as a kind of blackface.

Saldana also condemns critics who deemed her “too pretty” to play Simone, noting, “I never saw her as unattractive. Nina looks like half my family! But if you think the [prosthetic] nose was unattractive, then maybe you need to ask yourself, What do you consider beautiful?” Snap.

Hamilton and Jefferson debate!

ALISON GOLDBERG
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

If you still think the Financial District is just the stock exchange and jockeying for bar space with bankers, then it's time to give Lower Manhattan another look.

Your best chance to see what else the area has to offer is coming Tuesday, June 21, when the annual Night at the Museums means free admission to 16 area museums and historic landmarks from 4 p.m.-8 p.m.

Given the political climate around the world, it's a good time to reflect on the dangerous consequences of radicalism at the Museum of Jewish Heritage, which honors the 6 million Jews who died in the Holocaust. For those looking to learn more about the neighborhood, the South Street Seaport Museum just reopened with an exhibit on mid-18th century New York and how the port helped shape the city.

While you can simply walk into most of the museums, some, such as the National September 11 Memorial Museum, require reservations.

Many of the institutions will also have special tours and events during the evening — we've found five you can't miss.

Alexander Hamilton comes downtown

Because tickets to "Hamilton" were impossible to get even before it won 11 Tony Awards, find the next best thing at the National Archives of New York, where you can watch Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson debate the founding principles of our nation at 5:30 and 7 p.m. Meanwhile, down at Hamilton's favored pub, Fraunces Tavern Museum, browse its eight galleries of Revolutionary War-era history while listening to colonial music by balladeer Linda Russell and watching period dancing by the Tricorne Dance Ensemble. 1 Bowling Green; 54 Pearl St.

Get to know old and new Chinese traditions

The China Institute just moved downtown in September 2015 after almost 90 years on the Upper East Side, ready to impress visitors with its new space. Chinese culture comes alive with the Stephanie Chou Trio playing their mix of jazz-tinged classical and Chinese music, calligraphy demonstrations, treats from Chinatown Ice Cream Factory and the opening of its inaugural exhibit, "Art in a Time of Chaos." 100 Washington St.

Music in the streets

While strolling between museums, you'll likely hear a lot more music than usual. Make Music

New York, now in its 10th year, brings bands and soloists playing every kind of instrument — and some things you didn't even know could make music — to 1,200 spots all over the city. This year, its usual June 21 date coincides with Night at the Museums, so plan some diversions into your night by checking out the map of artists online at makemusicny.org.

The future of tall buildings

You can learn about everything to do with the towers that make up New York City's distinctive skyline at the Skyscraper Museum. But the future of building tall is happening in Asia, and founding director Carol Willis will personally lead a 5 p.m. tour of the museum's new exhibit, "Garden City | Mega City," about the tropical towers that help cities grow while mitigating the effects of climate change. 39 Battery Place

Yo-Yo Ma wants to build bridges, not walls

With the doc "The Music of Strangers," the legendary cellist wants to send good vibes.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

"I can be really nasty," Yo-Yo Ma confesses with a laugh. This is not what one would expect. He's one of the world's most renowned cellists — a child prodigy who, at 60, has long been enshrined as a legend. He has 18 Grammys to his name. But like most serious musicians, he's far from severe.

His warm and a mused demeanor doesn't change even when we talk about something serious. Ma is here with "20 Feet From Stardom" filmmaker Morgan Neville to talk about "The Music of Strangers," a documentary about the Silk Road Ensemble, the outfit he helped form in 1998 comprising musicians from all over the world.

For both Ma and Neville, the Silk Road Ensemble and the film about them were born out of a need to not just grow as artists, but use their art to change the world.

"How can I use film to make things better? How useful is my work? These are all issues I think about as a filmmaker," Neville says. "He and I were asking similar questions of ourselves."

One answer to their questions: Just as the film shows people from all over the world collaborating, it could inspire others to see past superficial differences, particularly at a time when bigotry and isolationism are being preached by a certain presidential candidate.

"Given the present environment, I think we're finding that, in fact, people can collaborate together if they share values — if they have respect for one another, for what the other person does, and the willingness to be generous," Ma says.

"One thing I've thought about as we started to screen the film is how much the work Yo-Yo does is about empathy," Neville says. "He's tried to use music to make friends, not strangers, out of people. These foreign cultures that get demonized in our media, he's tried to make them human. That's exactly what we do in documentary film — the experience of showing a life that seems totally different but in which you recognize a piece of yourselves in them. Film and music are very much about empathy."

In a way, Ma understands some people's reluctance to cross-cultural gaps.

"We're living in a world that we all acknowledge is changing so quickly, and very few people can keep up with that pace of change," says Ma. He points to how even something like Uber can be scary: It creates new paradigms or dramatically alters, if not reinvents, industries. "It's about change and disruption — which is good up to a certain point. But then how do people deal with change?

"For some people change makes them very fearful. One reaction to fear is to protect yourself. You form smaller communities, you build walls, you create some kind of distance between you and the other. That actually goes contrary to human nature. The other part of human nature is to open up, to be hospitable. One of the things we were trying to do together was to show that the antidote to fear is generosity. I don't mean to be saccharine, but the opposite of fear is love."

The mission of the Silk Road Ensemble doesn't end with the movie.

"We're building bridges, not walls. It's that simple," Ma says. "We can bring back walls, but then we're going to go back to medieval culture, when we have lots of forts and lots of moats — all firewalls, virtual ones or actual ones. But if we choose to be open and communicative, we'll actually have access to everyone's strengths. That will make for the strongest communities in the world."

Ed O'Neill: It's cool to cry at 'Finding Dory'

Ed O'Neill thinks of himself as a hired hand. On "Modern Family," as on "Married with Children," he likes to stick to the script, do his job and go home. So he's perfect for animation, a job that requires laying down a vocal track and then letting the animators do the rest. "Finding Dory" isn't his first animated film; he did a bit part in "Wreck-It Ralph." But it is his first major role. He plays Hank, a mimic octopus with seven tentacles who grouchyly helps Ellen DeGeneres' absent-minded blue tang as she searches for her long-lost parents.

Even people who don't cry at movies get choked up at Pixar films. Do you?

I haven't watched that many Pixar films. But I got choked up on this one! I remember thinking, "Oh my God, I'm going to cry!" I think what they do is they earn it. They earn the sentimentality. That's what makes it work so well. Oftentimes the emotion and sentimentality is not earned. You get a little choked up, but you forget it 10 minutes later. On this movie, the opposite is true. It will stay with you.

Dumb question, but how do you get in the mind of an octopus?

Who the f— knows what an octopus thinks? Although they certainly do think. I Googled "mimic octopus" and saw something on YouTube. It's stunning. There are many different kinds of octopi. The mimic octopus — and listen, don't quote me on this — is among the most amazing, because it shape-shifts, it color changes and it either seems to be thinking or is using some evolutionary tool. It adapts itself to so many different situations. If it's in an area where there's predators who are afraid of coral snakes, it will make itself look like a coral snake. That means it has to be aware of predators. If it's in an area where fish are afraid of lionfish, it becomes what looks like a lionfish. It's amazing. Google it!

Learning about things you might not otherwise is definitely one of the perks of being an actor.

You're exactly right. I'll tell you my favorite part of being an actor: When you go on location, wherever it is, you experience that part of the world in a way you never would in another situation. When you vacation, you don't get a feel for a place the way you would as an actor. If you went to Austria for a series or a miniseries, on your downtime you're not going to travel far, but you're going to find out everything you can about that locale — which tourists don't generally do. When you're an actor on location for four, five or six weeks, you get to know that place pretty well. MATT PRIGGE

Spoon away your stress levels

Building blocks: “I chose cacao for magnesium, it’s a calming agent,” explains Bro. “Mint cools you down and pistachios [are full of] minerals — they reduce blood pressure and provide heart healthy fats.”

- ¼ - 1/8 cup coconut milk
- 1 tsp cacao
- a few sprigs mint
- ¼ cup shelled pistachios
- 1 banana
- ½ cup frozen mixed berries

Toppings:

- gluten-free granola
- banana slices
- pistachios

- mint
- optional: raw honey

Cut your Sambazon Superfruit packs in half, break into blender. Add all other ingredients (except toppings), starting with a little liquid and adding more as needed. Blend thick. Another selling point: It’s the perfect canvas for your noshing needs. Acai’s versatile flavor allows you to add in just about any ingredient you like, says Bro.

“Because it has no sugar, it has the ability to go in a lot of different avenues of flavors,” she says. “It can go toward mixed berries, [or] it can also taste like cacao. You can go savory or sweet or somewhere in between.”

This doesn’t mean you load up the bowl like you’re at the topping bar of your favorite soft-serve joint, however.

“Try to avoid tons of processed toppings [like sugary granola],” Bro advises.

To help keep us on the right track, we asked the expert to create three recipes to target common urbanite woes.

Amp up your energy

Building blocks: "I used the Supergreens pack here because it doesn't have any added sugars, just servings of greens and vegetables," says Bro. "Yerba mate is a caffeine source derived from plants — it has a very sustained energy with no crash. And bacopa is an ayurvedic herb great for focus, brain health and the nervous system."

• 1 Sambazon Supergreens

- Supersfruit Pack
- 1 cup cold yerba mate
 - ½ inch fresh ginger
 - 1 tsp bacopa powder
 - ½ avocado, pitted and scooped out
 - 1/8-cup coconut shreds
 - 1 banana
 - ¼ cup frozen mixed berries

Put everything in a blender, blitz for 45 seconds, pour into a cup and enjoy. Top with a few shreds of coconut for looks.

Nurse your hangover

Building blocks:

"Watermelon is superhydrating," says Bro. "And basil just tastes a bit like summer."

- ½ cup watermelon chunks
- coconut water ice cubes, as needed
- 1 Sambazon Original or Pure Superfruit Pack
- 2 basil leaves

Fill an ice cube tray with coconut water and freeze. Cut your Sambazon Superfruit pack in half; break into chunks in blender. Add watermelon pieces, coconut water ice cubes and basil. Blend until combined, adding more ice cubes as needed. Pour into a glass, add a straw and enjoy.

Shoulder Arthritis Treatments Keeping Boomers Active Into Their 60's, 70's Even 80's?

If you suffer with painful shoulder arthritis — science may have finally found the answer you've been looking for.

Here is why: Researchers have discovered a natural gel like medicine that is like "joint oil." This all-natural gel is one of the naturally occurring lubricating substances in your shoulder joint that cushions and lubricates the joint which dries out over time due to wear-and-tear, age or injury. But when doctors precisely place this lubricating gel into your shoulder joint by using advanced digital imaging technology — it is like putting oil on a rusty door hinge. It lubricates the joint and can decrease pain and stiffness. For some, results can be dramatic and last for months. Years for some. Often times shoulder surgery can be avoided.

Know this: This is NOT a supplement you can buy over the counter or on the internet. This is a REAL medical treatment that must be given by a trained health care professional.

Most Insurance Plans Cover These Treatments: Most Union Plans 1199 GHI Work Comp Aetna, Cigna United Health Care (in or out of network) Empire Plan Empire BC BS Medicare AARP United Health Care Oxford ... and others

And the great news is: There is a free report and information kit available that tells you everything you need to know about this treatment. It also tells you all about cutting-edge medical clinics right here in New York City that are offering this cutting-edge treatment with tremendous success.

To get your information kit or to schedule a No-Obligation Risk Free Shoulder Screening simply call 800-627-PAIN (7246).

GameHedge offers 'good game guarantee'

If there's a blowout, you can get some cash back.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

If you're a sports fan, you've probably been "Tyson-ed" more than a few times.

During Mike Tyson's heyday in the boxing ring, fans would dish out a pretty penny on Pay-per-view TV to see Iron Mike flex his muscle. But because Tyson was so good, routinely knocking out opponents in the first or second round, consumers often felt ripped off by dishing out big bucks for five minutes worth of action.

People who attend sporting events in person are also "Tyson-ed" from time-to-time as there's no guarantee that you're going to witness a good game despite the ungodly amount of money pro sports tickets cost in 2016.

A new secondary market ticket company called GameHedge, however, is looking to rewrite that narrative. The company last week announced that it will offer 50 percent refunds of their ticket prices if a consumer attends a game in which the home team is blown out. For instance, if you buy a Yankees ticket off of GameHedge for $100 and the Yankees lose at Yankee Stadium by five or more runs, you'll get $50 back.

Bleacher tickets for tonight's Yankees vs. Rockies game at the Stadium are going for $21 on StubHub and $33 at GameHedge. GETTY IMAGES

"I'm a huge sports fan and I've been to many games," GameHedge founder Warren Friss told Metro. "I've had some amazing experiences but there are also times where you walk out of the game and you're just really disappointed that you spent so much money on such a bad game. You're fighting traffic, paying for parking, paying for concessions and the team doesn't do anything for you. In other businesses — like, if you go to a five-star restaurant and you're dissatisfied, the restaurant will do something to make it right. That doesn't happen in sports."

Friss has done the math, and 1 in 8 MLB games qualifies for the guarantee.

So how do they make money?

Comparing ticket prices in regards to tonight's Yankees-Rockies game at the Stadium, a bleacher ticket in section 235 goes for $21 on StubHub. On GameHedge a similar ticket is going for $33. GameHedge tickets are slightly higher across the board, but they're banking on people going to them based on the blowout guarantee.

GameHedge plans to implement the same type of good game guarantee for other major sports as well. For example, if an NFL team loses at home by 14 points or more, the consumer will get the refund, Friss says.

Changing the landscape

It's a very interesting time period when it comes to live sporting event attendance and the ticket industry. For instance, the NFL is so good on TV (the league again broke its own TV ratings records last season) that there is worry that fans will opt to stay home over going through the hassle and spending the money it takes to go to the live event. Sports-BusinessDaily reported in January that the NFL saw a small regular season attendance decline in the 2015 season and that there were just 12 teams in the league that played at 100 percent capacity in all of their home games. In response to this trend, the NFL has done things like installing its popular RedZone channel on TV monitors throughout their stadiums on game days. Time will tell if tweaks like that work.

Ticketmaster

Secondary sites like StubHub began popping up in part because of consumers' dissatisfaction with Ticketmaster, which had something close to a monopoly on the industry at the turn of the century. On Monday it was announced that around 50 million people are in line to receive vouchers for free tickets because of a class-action lawsuit over Ticketmaster's ticket fees.

COPA AMERICA: ARGENTINA WILL TEST USA

The United States is guaranteed two more games after making the Copa America Final Four.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

At least up until this point, U.S. men's soccer couldn't have asked for a better scenario over these last few weeks: After losing, 2-0, to Colombia in the opener, they have won three straight games to reach the 2016 Copa America semifinals on their home turf.

With that, they are guaranteed two more matches in this tournament against some of the best national teams in the world. Of course now comes the really difficult part as the U.S. takes on Argentina on Tuesday (9 p.m., Fox Sports 1) at Houston's NRG Stadium. The winner of that will take on the winner of Wednesday's (8 p.m., Fox Sports 1) other semifinal — Chile vs. Colombia — on Sunday in the Final with the losers meeting in the third-place game on Saturday.

Argentina looked the part of the No. 1 team as they dispatched Venezuela, 4-1, on Saturday at Gillette Stadium in Foxboro, Massachusetts. Iconic midfielder Lionel Messi started for the first time in this Copa America and responded with a goal and two assists as he received the Man of the Match award afterwards. This is the fourth time in their last five tournaments (Copa America, World Cup) that Argentina has reached at least the semifinals. As their manager Gerardo Martino said, "We came here (to the United States) with one goal in mind: to win the 2016 Copa America."

Besides the crowd that should be firmly behind them in Texas (although Argentina's fans traveled well, with 59,183 mostly wearing their colors at Gillette), the other tangible advantage the Americans could have over the Argentines is rest. It's debatable if it will make much of a difference, but the U.S. beat Ecuador 2-1 Thursday so they have basically two more full days of rest and recovery. That is probably nullified by the fact that the U.S. will be down three starters against Argentina after midfielder Jermaine Jones picked up a red card with striker Bobby Wood and midfielder Alejandro Bedoya respectively receiving their second yellow cards of the tournament thus triggering an automatic one-game suspension.

Argentina owns the best offense in soccer as they have already racked up 14 goals in just four games

Striker Clint Dempsey has scored a goal in each of the last three matches for the U.S., so he will no doubt be closely watched by Argentina wherever he goes on the field.

Can American striker Clint Dempsey stay red hot against Argentina? GETTY IMAGES
